In the next 30 years, the Metropolitan Council envisions a greater Minneapolis-St. Paul metropolitan area whose competitive, vibrant economy affords advantages and opportunities for a diverse and growing population. Strong local communities that enhance our standard of living and a vital region that works on all levels make the Twin Cities the best metropolitan area in the nation, unmatched in its economic potential and quality of life. Through its superior livability, coordinated planning and efficient public service delivery, the region attracts talent, jobs and economic prosperity.

In order to maintain and improve upon the advantages of the region, the Metropolitan Council is committed to utilizing the 2040 Framework to strengthen the region's competitiveness and expanding opportunities and equity through policies that create or improve upon:

- efficiency and innovation in the delivery of regional services;
- effective stewardship of public dollars, natural resources and the existing built environment;
- availability of housing choices to accommodate the unique needs and diversity of our population;
- a multimodal transportation system that connects people to jobs, school and services and that offers opportunities for long-term economic development;
- use of resources in a way that meets the needs of the present without jeopardizing the region's future needs.

The Council is committed to collaborative decision-making that honors the varying viewpoints of the region.

The Twin Cities competes globally and thrives locally because we function as one region, with one economy. Building upon our state's legacy of good planning, civic pride and visionary leadership, the Twin Cities has a government that is as good as its people. In short, the Twin Cities is and will be in 2040, a place where individuals and businesses can prosper – a wonderful place to live, to work, and raise a family.
